

Kaleidoscope: Integrating Research Across Disciplines

Kaleidoscope from the Greek kalos, meaning “beautiful,” eidos meaning “form,” and scopos meaning “to look at.”

Kaleidoscope: Integrating Research Across Disciplines is a peer-reviewed, interdisciplinary research journal published online by the College of Arts, Sciences, and Allied Services and the Faculty Council of the College of Arts, Sciences, and Allied Services of Saint Leo University.

Kaleidoscope embodies the beauty of intellectual diversity. Just as a kaleidoscope reveals a dynamic symphony of patterns and colors, this publication brings together a vibrant array of perspectives from multiple academic disciplines to illuminate a wide range of subjects.

In the spirit of its Greek roots, Kaleidoscope offers a unique platform for scholars to explore issues, problems, and topics of interest through the lens of interdisciplinary research. Each paper we publish is a testament to the power of this approach, harnessing the resources of multiple academic disciplines to cast new light on the subject under consideration.

Our mission is to foster a deeper understanding of the world around us by encouraging scholars to move beyond the confines of their own discipline and to engage with other fields of study. The result is a richer, more nuanced analysis that offers fresh insights and broadens the horizons of knowledge.

In essence, Kaleidoscope is not just a journal—it is a celebration of the beautiful forms that emerge when we dare to look at the world through multiple lenses. Join us in this exciting journey of discovery and enlightenment.
